Milan – Generali Global Corporate & Commercial (GC&C) and Protos Check Srl, company part of Protos Group – a leading consulting firm specialized in technical and financial advisory for large project in infrastructures, renewable & green energy plants and real estate – reaffirmed their partnership supporting GC&C's construction and engineering renewable energy ambitions.

This collaboration will enable GC&C to offer a greater breadth of technical services in risk analysis, risk mitigation and risk monitoring for large construction projects, with a focus on renewable / green energy.

The agreement covers GC&C all territories, with specific focus on Italy, UK, Iberia & Latam, ACEER and Asia.

GC&C is now able to provide an extensive range of risk engineering services to its clients, further leveraging a solid technical expertise achieved over the years. In line with the Group's Lifetime Partner ambition, Generali's P&C business unit can increasingly protect clients' business activities while strengthening their resilience in respect of crucial emerging risks of our times.

Manlio Lostuzzi, Generali Global Corporate & Commercial CEO, said: "Risk assessment and monitoring in construction and complex infrastructures management is a key service into our business proposition to clients. Moreover, the market is starting to look further carefully at the construction world, thanks also to the important financial support of governments' post pandemic plans to this industry, as well as to the renewable energy one. Thanks to the collaboration with Protos, we strengthen our ability to meet the most sophisticated clients' insurance needs, by further preventing and mitigating their risk exposures, while enhancing our existing technical capabilities".

Lorenzo Brogini, Protos Check (CEO), said: "We are very pleased to renew and consolidate the partnership with Generali at international level. The perfect synergy of experience and specialist skills creates peaks of excellence in the offer of risk assessment and management services in the infrastructure sector. A sector which certainly requires significant investments, also aimed at revamping the existing, for people safety and greater protection of the environment. We are grateful to Generali GC&C for the confidence and the expectation placed in our company, with the aim of further increasing the collaboration activities in construction and green energy sectors".
